PROPOSED SALE OF PUBLIC LANDS IN COLORADO.

A proclamation for a public sale of twenty-five hundred thousand acres of land, at Denver, Colorado, has been issued. The sales begin September 13.

THE COLORED PRINTER.

A letter was received to-day from the Secretary of the Denver Typographical Union, by the Secretary of the peace here, which the members of the latter regard as placing Douglass in the same relation to them he is said never worked anywhere else, and that few consider of receiving him must turn entirely upon the matter of color. Yesterday, however, Douglass was transferred from the card to the permit list

THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE, WEDNESDAY, JUNE 2, 1869.

CHICAGO LIBRARY ASSOCIATION.

Shall the Reading-Room be Open on Sunday?—Dr. Cuyler Thinks it Ought to be.

A meeting of the members of the Chicago Library Association was held last evening to consider the propriety of calling a meeting to decide whether the library and reading-room shall or shall not be thrown open on Sunday. The question was opened to the meeting by the President, who occupied the chair, and briefly stated the object of the meeting.

Mr. Ireland emphatically opposed the movement. He was a Christian and considered that the opening of the library would be a desecration of the Sabbath.

One or two members supported the movement, when the Chairman was called upon for his opinion.

He said that as a minister of the Gospel, as a man claiming to be a Christian, and desirous to support the best interests of the institution and of the city generally, he was of opinion that the library should be opened on Sunday. If not, then it were manifest, in the first place, the representation of the Executive Committee, a sentiment of the city—the President of the Young Men's Christian Association—had opened his reading-room on Sunday. He had been speaking to the Executive Committee a few days ago, and was by him informed that the subject had been carefully discussed, and no action was taken; it was generally conceded to be a good thing, but some difficulty was apprehended in having the rooms open during church hours, because every person, upon getting through to church, Mr. Moody thought, would attempt to go to the library. Now, he (Mr. Cuyler) was of opinion that the difficulty was more imaginary than real. He had visited the rooms on Sunday, and noticed on that day the rooms were thronged with men, not with boys, not with young men, but with men of mature years, who were glad to go and spend an hour in reading periodicals and papers, all of which were open for their perusal on the day of the members on Sunday, as on other days. It would, however, be a wholly unnecessary thing to have the library open on Sunday, because he never liked to go against a wholesome public sentiment, and he would not go against it in this case. He believed that Mr. Moody had boldly announced that Mr. Moody is a man credited with great sincerity, and of very considerable ability, and takes the lead in the religious movements of this city. He (Mr. Cuyler) was of opinion that the opening of the library would not have been a great if it were not for the ministers of the city. This change of sentiment was the result of a change in the public mind, and he (Mr. Cuyler) was of opinion that the time had arrived when the library should be opened on Sunday. He was in favor of the movement, and would vote for it.

Mr. Ireland said that he was opposed to the movement, and had consulted the views of many of his friends, who were also opposed to it. He was of opinion that the opening of the library would be a violation of the ordinance of the Sabbath, and he would not vote for it.

Mr. Hall was in favor of the movement, and had been impressed with the idea that the library should be open on Sunday. He was opposed to the opening of the library on Sunday, because he thought it
